As Editors of this publication, we continue to try to provide to both prelaw advisors and prelaw students the most current and useful information possible. In the spring of this year we conducted our annual survey of ABA accredited law schools in the United States in order to update these lists of law school academic programs, clinical programs, available scholarships, admission policies and other information. Two notes, both caveats, should be added here. First, this is really a reference book, a ready reference, we hope. Individual schools should be contacted for more information. Second, both advisors and students should be cautious when selecting a law school on the basis of one or just a few factors such as specialized programs, joint-degree programs, salary ranges, student organizations, etc. For the most part, a legal education is a general education in law and specialization occurs after law school. Applicants should look at the total program presented by a law school and see which school in its totality seems to best meet their needs.

We hope that users of this book will also recognize that these lists are compiled from information received from law schools and that they are, to coin a phrase, “subject to change without notice.”

A word of appreciation, actually far more than a word, is due to Ms. Terry Wilkerson and Marguerite Geagan in the PreLaw Advising Center at Duke University. An additional word of appreciation is due to Heather C. Struck of SUNY Binghamton for her research on Dean's Certification Letters & Summer Conditional Programs. A very special thank you is owed to Rita Callahan Ralston who edited and supervised this project this year.

Please note that NAPLA and SAPLA do not endorse, support or acknowledge the effectiveness or utility of any commercial test preparation or advising program.

Some law schools offer graduate work in a general field of law while others have graduate programs in a specific area of the law. A number of law schools have joint degree programs whereby a student may combine his/her legal studies with course work in another discipline. In these cases some of the credits from the law courses will count toward the graduate degree in the other discipline while some of the graduate work will fulfill a part of the law degree. When these programs are available the individual will generally be able to complete the two degrees in a year less than if they were taken separately. A large number of law schools give special emphasis to certain areas of the law but not enough work to warrant a graduate program.

The information on the following pages was compiled from a questionnaire submitted to the law schools by Dean Edward Stern of Boston University and Dr. Gerald Wilson of Duke University.* Again thanks are due to Ms. Rita Callahan Ralston, who shepherded this process from beginning to end, Marguerite Geagan, and Terry Wilkerson for their participation.

Many schools change their programs from one year to another. After finding the special program in which a student is interested, attention should be given to the most recent bulletin of that school. Several schools have indicated that a student might be able to work out another joint degree program on an individual basis.

* When there is an asterisk (*) beside a school, the information came from the Official Guide rather than from a response to the Stern/Wilson Survey.

Washington University

Western New England College School of Law
Our dual degree programs are designed to be completed in 4 years, but students have been able to complete the JD/MBA in less time.

Yale Law School
Yes, we have a 3-year accelerated, integrated JD/MBA with Yale’s SOM.
D. AREAS OF EMPHASIS WITHOUT A GRADUATE DEGREE

Advisors and students should note that the primary function of law school curriculum is to offer a general education in law. In most cases, specialization in one area of the law comes with on the job experience after law school. Caution should be exercised in using this list of “Areas of Emphasis” as the primary factor in choosing a law school. Students should also be aware of the possibility that too narrow specialization may limit job opportunities.

E (i). LAW SCHOOLS PARTICIPATING IN PROGRAMS WHICH OFFER A LAW DEGREE FROM A FOREIGN COUNTRY (IN ADDITION TO THE JD)

American University
JD/Master of Laws (Monash University Law School; Melbourne, Australia); JD/JD (University of Ottawa; Ottawa, Canada); JD/Master I/Master II (Nanterre; Paris, France)

University of Colorado
The University of Colorado participates in a dual program with the University of Alberta (Canada). The student does 2 years in each program and receives both a JD and LLB.

Columbia University
Columbia Law School offers the following Double Degree Programs: J.D./LL.M and J.D./LL.B. with the London School of Economics, University College London, King's College, and School of Oriental and African Studies. J.D./Master with the University of Paris I (Sorbonne). J.D./Master with Sciences Po (Institut d'Etudes Politiques) and University of Paris I. J.D./LL.M. with the Institute for Law and Finance (JohannWolfgang Goethe University, Frankfurt).

Cornell University
JD-Master en Droit (French Law Degree), JD-Master in Global Business Law (French National Law Degree)

University of Detroit Mercy
J.D./LED Mexico; J.D./LLB Canada

Duke Law School
Duke Law School and a consortium of two French universities, l'Universite Paris 1 Pantheon-Sorbonne and Institut d'Etudes Politiques de Paris (known as "Sciences Po"), offer a dual JD/Master in Global Business Law degree. This dual degree program allows students to receive, after three years of study, both the JD and the Master of Laws degrees. The Master of Laws is a French national law degree that entitles students to sit for the French Bar exam. Students in the JD/Master program spend two years at Duke and a third year studying in Paris.

Georgetown University Law Center
A year-long Master's program has been created in Paris through a joint effort by two of France’s most highly regarded universities —Institut d'Etudes Politiques de Paris (Sciences Po) and l'Universite Paris 1 Pantheon-Sorbonne Law School (Sorbonne). In addition to the Master of Laws, a French national law degree, Georgetown students receive a total of 14 Georgetown credits toward their JD degree. This program requires that the students take an additional semester at Georgetown (though without any additional tuition requirement).

Harvard University
University of Cambridge J.D./LL.M.

New York University School of Law
New York University School of Law has two dual degree programs where students can earn a JD and the equivalent thereof with schools in other countries—the JD/JD program with Osgoode Hall in Canada, and the JD/LL.B program with the National University of Singapore.

Northwestern University
Northwestern University participates in a dual degree program with France.

Nova Southeastern University
Nova Southeastern University participates in dual degree programs in Spain (Barcelona), Czech Republic (Prague), and Italy.

University of Pennsylvania
JD/LLM with the University of Hong Kong. Students spend their third year of Law School studying for their LLM.

Saint Louis University
St. Louis University participates in a program in France which leads to the French law degree.

Stetson University
JD/Grado Program Dual Degree in Spain and the U.S.

CLINICAL PROGRAMS

This section of the Book of Law School Lists attempts to give a listing of areas in which clinical programs are offered. Given the great variety of clinical programs and the even greater variety of titles given to these programs, we believe that it is more useful to simply identify areas. Often these clinical programs assume the form of internships or externships. Specific details about each program can be found in individual law school bulletins or in ABA-LSAC Official Guide to ABA-Approved Law Schools.

Two notes may be helpful to the reader:

First, where there is an asterisk (*) beside a school, the information came from The Official Guide rather than from a response to the Stern/Wilson survey.

Second, the list concludes with a category simply called “Various.” Resisting the temptation to label it “Miscellaneous,” the editors listed schools which indicate that they have clinical programs but did not offer specific information. In many of these cases, clinical programs are arranged individually according to the needs of the student and the opportunities available. Students and advisors should examine information provided individually by these schools.

Pro Bono Work Requirement/Public Service Requirement

Appalachian School of Law: The Externship requirement (three credit hours) allows students to apply the skills learned in the core curriculum. Students typically take this course during the summer following their first year of studies at the Law School. Students work for a total of approximately 225 unpaid hours in a judges’ chambers, public law office, or public interest organization under the direct supervision of a licensed attorney.

Boston University Law School encourages students to join the Pro Bono Program, which gives students the opportunity to dedicate their developing legal skills to unmet legal needs in the Boston area, throughout the United States and around the world. Through the Pro Bono Program, J.D. student provide 35 hours of law-related service during their three years at BU Law (LL.M. students provide 12 hours) to organizations dedicated to underrepresented groups and or social issues. Upon completion, students receive a notation on their law school transcripts confirming participation in the program.

University of Colorado

University of Colorado encourages pro bono activities by a voluntary Public Service Pledge program. Students who complete 50 hours of law-related public service work in law school will be recognized at graduation and work will be reflected on transcript.

Columbia University: Every candidate for a J.D. degree must devote 40 hours to public interest field work between the start of the second year of law school and the end of the third year as a prerequisite for graduation. Work will qualify if it is uncompensated (financially or by academic credit), public interest or public service law-related work, broadly defined and regardless of political orientation.

Cornell University

The Public Interest Law Union and the Office of Public Service can help you start building your commitment to pro bono service during law school. The purpose of the Public Service Challenge is to provide school-wide recognition of Cornell Law Students who devote time to public service activities. Students who participate in the Public Service Challenge will receive a Certificate from Dean Stewart Schwab upon each level of completion.

University of Denver

Public Interest
50 hours during law school tenure

University of District of Columbia School of Law

Through Duke University’s Pro Bono Project, students provide volunteer legal services in individual areas of interest. While not required, participation is strongly encouraged.

Florida State does have a pro bono requirement. Students must fulfill 20 hours of pro bono/public service work during the second or third year of law school.

Georgetown University Law Center encourages students to participate in pro bono activities through the Pro Bono Challenge. Students who perform at least 75 hours of law-related pro bono work during their years at Georgetown are recognized at Graduation.

Georgia State University To encourage and support students who provide pro bono services to the community, the College of Law has adopted the Georgia State University College of Law Pro Bono Recognition Program. Pro bono activities include not only those that ensure adequate legal services for moderate and low income individuals but efforts that enhance the capacity of law and legal institutions to do justice, and activities in the local community that promote justice. The College of Law’s pro bono recognition program is designed to encouraged students to engage in such activities while in law school and thus conduct themselves in accordance with highest values and standards of the legal profession.

Hamline University School of Law has a pro bono service requirement of 24 hours over the course of law school.

The University of Hawaii School of Law has a pro bono/public service requirement which requires all students to perform at least 60 hours of uncompensated public service work.

The Pro Bono Project at Indiana University School of Law—Bloomington is a cooperative program between the Law School and the bar and bench of the surrounding area to provide civil legal assistance to people who could not otherwise afford it. Students are assigned to work closely with volunteer lawyer on a wide variety of matters.

The University of Idaho College of Law is committed to providing opportunities for law students that emphasize the value and habit of service to the community. Accordingly, all students are required to perform 40 hours of uncompensated law-related pro bono service as a condition of graduation. The purpose of this pro bono requirement is to instill in students a commitment to their responsibility as lawyers to give back to the community and promote justice by assisting the underserved and underrepresented. As a result of the program, students gain practical legal experience, clients are served, and legal service providers gain valuable assistance. Students are given the opportunity to fulfill their public service requirements in a wide range of settings, including legal service organizations, government agencies, private firms (pro bono cases), non-profits, and legislative offices.
Indiana University School of Law—Indianapolis encourages pro bono’s involvement through a variety of placement opportunities ranging from community based agencies to governmental entities.

Loyola Law School—Los Angeles mandates 40 hours public service work beginning entering class of Fall 94 and thereafter.

The University of Louisville—Brandeis School of Law has a pro bono/public service requirement. After completion of their first year and before their final semester of law school, students must perform a minimum of 30 hours of uncompensated public service work. Institutional support is provided in the form of a half-time director and a half-time assistant who help students in meeting this requirement by having over 300 locations identified as well as assisting students in establishing other locations according to their individual interest.

University of Maine School of Law’s faculty has adopted a voluntary student pro bono legal service standard under which every student is encouraged to provide a minimum of 80 hours of pro bono legal service prior to the time of graduation.

“Pro bono legal service” is defined as work involving the provision of legal services that is performed without either financial compensation or academic credit.

Examples include such work for legal services providers, individual lawyers providing pro bono service, social service agencies, low income organizations, civil rights organizations, environmental organizations, consumer organizations, and governmental agencies providing service to individual members of the public who are disadvantaged. Partisan political activity is not included in the definition of “pro bono legal services.” Students achieving 80 hours are recognized at graduation.

University of Maryland requires full-time day students to complete a public service requirement by taking one of a number of credit bearing courses in which students have substantial responsibility for providing legal assistance to poor persons or organizations representing the interest of poor persons. These courses:

a) provide students with an experience (including direct professional contact with poor persons) on how the law operates in practice; and

b) include regular classes in which the faculty member provides instruction that, when integrated with the practice experience, will help the students to understand, apply and critique theory and practice; and

c) have a professional responsibility component.

University of Nebraska seeks to encourage and recognize volunteer legal service by second and third year students through the Pro Bono Initiative. Students completing 40 hours or more of approved, qualified pro bono work during their second and/or third years will receive a Dean’s certificate upon graduation.

University of Nevada, Las Vegas—William S. Boyd School of Law requires first-year students to participate in a community service program in which teams of students, working with Legal Aid Center of Southern Nevada prepare and conduct weekly workshops for unrepresented people on basic procedures in family or small claims court and on basic landlord/tenant law and bankruptcy law.

University of North Carolina:

The Pro Bono Program tracks the number of hours completed by each law student in order to recognize outstanding pro bono service. Students completing fifty of more hours of pro bono service receive a letter from the Director of the Pro Bono Program and the Dean of the law school acknowledging the contribution they have made to our community. Those who do more than seventy-five hours of pro bono service while a law student are recognized by the North Carolina Bar Association at the public service reception held at the end of each school year in the law school Rotunda. Furthermore, students who complete one hundred or more hours of pro bono service are individually acknowledged at law school graduation. Students completing 50 or more hours during their law school career will receive special notations on their official transcripts.

Northeastern University: The School of Law is committed to the belief that all attorneys, regardless of the practitioner’s area of law, have a duty to serve the public. Therefore, all students must fulfill a public interest graduation requirement. Public interest under this rule is defined as employment or service with a government agency; a legal aid, legal services, public defender, victim advocate or similar agency; an organization or attorney advocating law reform or performing pro bono legal representation; or any placement where the dominant characteristic is service to underrepresented groups. Judicial internships and private firms operated for profit are not included in this definition. The requirement may be fulfilled in several ways, including completion of a public interest co-op or any one of the law school’s clinical courses.

Northwestern University. We expect all students to complete at least 40 hours of community service work during their J.D. degrees.

The Nova Southeastern University Law Center Pro Bono Honor Program recognizes students who work pro bono for the public interest while enrolled in law school. Students completing a certain number of service hours will be awarded this graduation honor. The program is part of the Public Interest Law Center, which provides information and resources to students interested in working for the public interest and acknowledges that work. All students maintaining a minimum 2.0 GPA are eligible.
The University of Pennsylvania Law School requires all students entering the J.D. Program to perform 70 hours of unpaid public service work over the course of their J.D. Program through the Toll Public Interest Center.

Roger Williams University School of Law—requires all students to complete 50 hours of law-related public service over the course of their J.D. Program.

Rutgers University School of Law—Newark: The Pro Bono Program places students in a wide variety of public interest or public service law offices where students perform a minimum of 35 hours of service. The program is voluntary. Actually, more than 100 students (about 15% of the student body) participate.

Santa Clara University: Students seeking to earn the Public Interest Law Certificate must complete 50 hours of community volunteer work promoting public interest and social justice.

University of South Carolina: Through the University of South Carolina’s Pro Bono Program, students provide volunteer legal services to a variety of projects and areas of interests. Participation is not required, but strongly encouraged and opportunities for service are readily available.

South Texas College of Law: The College’s Pro Bono Honors Program seeks to encourage professionalism both by providing pro bono public service opportunities for students and by recognizing this service through a formal certificate program. Students enrolled in this voluntary certificate program may perform their pro bono work at a pre-approved placement or seek approval for an alternative placement from the program director.

Southern Methodist requires all students entering the J.D. Program in the Fall of 1993 or thereafter to complete 30 hours of work in approved law-related public service placements.

St. Thomas University will mandate law students to complete 40 hours of pro bono work as a requirement for graduation. It is designed to give second and third year students legal experience under the supervision of lawyers in a variety of non-profit offices, government agencies, and law firms. This requirement will be effective beginning with the academic year 2000–2001.

Stetson University College of Law: As a requirement for graduation, each student must complete 60 hours of public service.

Syracuse University College of Law Recognition for Pro Bono and Community Service: in recognition of the commitment to pro bono and community service work by students of the Syracuse University College of Law, the following recognition program has been created. Students who are in good academic standing and have completed at least 30 hours of pro bono and community service will receive special recognition at graduation. There are two categories of Pro Bono and Community Service Recognition Awards.

Blue Pro Bono Community Service Award: (complete the recommended 30 hours of service) Orange Pro Bono and Community Service Award: (exceed the recommended 30 hours of service by at least 1 full hour)

In addition, the top three graduating students providing the most pro bono and community service hours shall be individually recognized.

Texas Wesleyan School of Law: Each student must perform no less than thirty hours of pro bono work through a placement that has been pre-approved by the School of Law. The pro bono work may be commenced following the completion of the first year of law school, and must be completed prior to graduation. The student is responsible for selecting a placement, contacting that office, arranging to do the work, completing the work, and filling out all proper forms. The work must be law related; clerical work is appropriate only to the extent needed to carry out the overall legal task. The work must be uncompensated; students may not receive monetary compensation, academic credit, or other tangible benefits for performing the service. The work must be supervised by an attorney.

Touro Law Center: As a condition of graduation, every student must satisfy the Public Interest Law Perspective Requirement by successful completion of certain clinical programs or classroom courses or by certification of 40 hours of pro bono work.

Tulane Law School was the first in the country to institute a mandatory pro bono or a community service program. Since 1987, Tulane has required each graduating student to have performed 20 hours of supervised, uncompensated legal work for clients who could not otherwise afford assistance. In 2006 requirement was increased to 30 hours.

Valparaiso University School of Law adopted a pro bono requirement in 1988. Valparaiso law students must perform 20 hours of legal service on behalf of indigents. The required hours are ungraded, but appear on the student’s transcript.

Willamette University College of Law: Willamette’s voluntary pro bono Honors Program enables student to enhance their learning experience by participating in community-based legal service projects. Students gain valuable hands-on involvement in the community by volunteering with a government agency or with a public interest or nonprofit organization. All Willamette law students are eligible to participate and receive pro bono Honors credit.

Western State University College of Law has a voluntary Public Service Program in which students use their legal skills to perform law-related work for the community and the underprivileged and are recognized for that work upon completing 40 hrs. of service.
William & Mary: The Legal Skills Program is a mandatory, two-year program designed to teach students essential lawyering skills and ethical concepts through participation in simulated law firms. In these law firms, the students handle simulated cases from interviewing the client through trial and appeal. The Program requires that each law firm develop a pro bono policy for its student members to implement.

William Mitchell College of Law: Provides a wide variety of volunteer options through the Minnesota Justice Foundations. Students who serve 50 or more hours through MJF or clinics receive a transcript certification.

Widener University School of Law: Provides a special recognition at graduation for law students who perform a minimum of 60 hours of pro bono work over the course of their J.D. career.

Washburn University School of Law: Washburn University School of Law Certificate programs include a public service component. First year students also meet public service requirements.

This section of the Book of Law School Lists contains a summary of specialized law school publications open for student participation. Since the standard law review is a staple of law schools no separate listing was made.

In addition to the scholarly specialized publications listed in the next few pages, many law schools publish newspapers, newsletters and yearbooks. In most cases these are entirely student run.

As is the case with the listing of Clinical Programs, publications have been listed in categories rather than by specific name. Further information about these publications can be obtained by examining individual school bulletins or by consulting LSAC/LSDAS Official Guide To U.S. Law Schools. Where designated by an asterisk (*), the information came from the Official Guide rather than a response to the Stern/Wilson survey.

3. Angela D. Dales Merit Scholarship Program for first-year students:
   • Merit Scholarships are awarded in the form of a credit against the tuition charged to the student who receives the award.
   • Eligibility for an award during the student’s first year of Law School is determined based on the student’s Law School Admissions Test (LSAT) score and undergraduate grade point average (UGPA) as determined by LSAC. Eligibility for retention of an award during the student’s second and third years is determined based on the student’s academic performance during Law School.
   • The Law School is able to award only a limited number of these scholarships, and scholarships will be awarded on a first-come, first-served basis. Applicants therefore are encouraged to complete their Law School application at the earliest possible date. An award is not finalized until the applicant has been accepted to the Law School and has paid his or her seat deposit.
   • Transfer students are not eligible for Merit Scholarships.

   Goodwin Scholars: $20,000 Merit Scholarship

Ohio Northern University

1. Legal Scholar Program:
   With a strong academic background, you may be eligible for a Legal Scholar Award. Your application for admission will be automatically considered for all scholarship opportunities. The College of Law has established the following scholarship categories for the 1999 entering class.

   If you meet the following scholarship criteria, you are placed into an accelerated admissions process. Typically, you will be informed of admissions and scholarship decisions from Ohio Northern no more than three weeks after application.

   All scholarships awarded through the Legal Scholar Program are renewable each year, so long as the recipient remains in good academic standing for scholarship students.

2. Judicial Scholarship:
   If you have a 3.2 or higher cumulative GPA and scored 157 or above on the LSAT, you would likely receive a scholarship of at least $15,000.

3. Barrister Scholarship:
   If you have a 3.0 or higher cumulative GPA and scored 154 or 156 on the LSAT, you would likely receive a scholarship of at least $12,000.

4. Counselor Scholarship:
   If you have a 2.8 or higher cumulative GPA and scored 152 or 153 on the LSAT, you would likely receive a scholarship of at least $8,000.

5. Dean Scholarship:
   Applicants with competitive LSAT scores and GPAs who do not qualify for a Judicial, Barrister or Counselor award will be considered for a Dean’s scholarship. The award amounts will vary and are based on a careful review of the applicant’s entire file.
6. Additional Scholarship Programs
   a. ONU Grand Awards:
      On the basis of academic qualifications, personal qualities, and established financial need, Grand Awards are made to selected students who will enhance diversity in the student body and the legal profession. The awards are renewable each year, as long as the recipient remains in good academic standing.
   b. Merit Awards:
      The college of Law awards scholarships to students who excel during their first year in law school, but who have not received any of the previously listed scholarships or grants. These awards up to $10,000—are based on the cumulative first year GPA, in amounts linked to the level of performance.

B. SCHOOLS OFFERING A SUMMER CONDITIONAL ADMISSION PROGRAM

Only those schools responding to the Wilson/Stern Survey are included.

Appalachian School of Law

The Pre-Admission Summer Opportunity (PASO) program is for students who may have the potential to succeed as law students and lawyers, but whose skills and talents may not be reflected fully by the traditional measures of the LSAT and undergraduate performance. PASO is a program that provides participants an opportunity to experience law school course work and an opportunity for the faculty to evaluate the students' performance to assess the ability to succeed in law school. PASO participants who successfully complete the program may be offered admission to the entering class in August of the year in which they complete the program or in the following year's entering class, depending upon availability factors.

University of Baltimore

A 4 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take one class that interweaves substantive issues with a writing component. Students do not receive credit for the class. Between 30 and 40 students participate based on perceived likelihood of success. Students admitted generally have lower than desired LSAT scores or GPA, but have either outstanding issues in their record or are minority applicants with strong GPAs. There is no special application procedure however, the applicant may request to be placed in the program. In order to matriculate in the fall, students must have a 70 average at the end of the program. The program incurs no cost to the student. The contact person for the program is Professor John Lynch, jlynch@ubalt.edu.

Campbell Law School

Approximately 50–75 students are given the opportunity to participate in our seven week performance-based admission program (P BAP). The students take two courses of three credit hours each. A final exam is given in each course. A student who receives a "B" in both courses is automatically admitted to the fall program. Students who do not meet this criteria, but who demonstrate potential for success in law school, will be placed on a waiting list for the fall program.

University of Detroit Mercy

An 8 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take two classes, Legal Writing and Criminal Law. Students do not receive credit for the classes. Approximately 20 students generally participate. The Special Summer Program (SSP) is operated for minority, disadvantaged, or disabled applicants who do not meet the minimum standards of the entering class, but show potential for the study of law. SSP applicants must have at least one LSAT score in the 15th percentile. Question 13 of the application asks the applicant if he/she would like to be considered for the SSP. In a separate statement, applicants must describe the circumstances that qualify him/her for the SSP. In case of a disability, the applicant is requested to provide documentation. To be eligible for matriculation in the fall, students of the program must pass the substantive criminal law course, pass the legal research and writing course, and receive the unanimous evaluation of the SSP faculty. The cost of the program is $500 for tuition and $18 for parking. The contact person for the program is Kimberly Jones, Director of Recruitment, Admission and Student Affairs, joneski@udmercy.edu.
University of the District of Columbia

A 4 week summer conditional admission program. Required classes are Legal Writing, Reasoning and Analysis (class and tutorials); Torts and Criminal Law or Contracts. Students do not receive credit for the summer classes. Approximately 8 to 16 students participate. Criteria for admission into the program varies, usually the LSAT and/or GPA are below the “accepted” numerical standards or the student’s writing or organizational skills may be of concern and below what is deemed acceptable. There is no special application procedure. The student must attend every class and complete every assignment and exam in order to meet the condition of his or her admission into the fall class. At the end of the program each student is provided with an evaluation of his or her performance in the program; they are also counseled about their progress and about areas in which they may need to improve. If appropriate the program director recommends that students participate in the Academic Support Program. There is no cost to the student for participating in the program. The contact person for the program is Professor Derek Alphran, Director of the Summer Mason Enhancement Program for Academic Success (MEPAS); he can be reached at dalphran@udc.edu.

Florida Coastal School of Law

The Alternative Admission Model Program for Legal Education (AAMPLE®) is a performance-based admissions program that rewards students who demonstrate the desire, commitment, and level of achievement necessary to manage the rigors of law school. Students are required to take two law school courses selected from our regular law school curriculum and modified to provide the most accurate indication of a student’s potential for law school success. Students may choose to take the courses on-campus or online. Within each course, students will take two quizzes and a final exam. Students who successfully pass each course with a 2.5 G.P.A. or higher are automatically accepted into the school’s Juris Doctor program. Florida Coastal offers the AAMPLE program twice a year—once in the summer for admission to our fall class and once in the fall for admission to our spring class. For more information, please contact Nicole Schumer, Assistant Director of Admissions, at nschumer@fcsl.edu.

George Mason University

Indiana University School of Law—Indianapolis

An 8 week summer program that selected students must participate in as a condition of admission. Continuation in the fall is not conditioned on their performance in the summer program. Students are required to take one course, a Legal Methods class with an emphasis on Legal Writing, for which they will receive 2 credits. Between 25–35 students generally participate in the program. Selection for the program is based on a variety of factors, for example unparallel indicators, out of school for a number of years, English as a second language, or heavy science or math background with little writing. Applicants who wish to be considered for this program need to apply by February 1st instead of the normal deadline, March 1st. The program costs the rate of two credit hours, and typically nonresidents receive a scholarship. For more information contact the Office of Admissions.

Louisiana State University

Legal Methods course, successful completion, admission for Fall. Must have approval of Faculty Committee to enter summer program.

University of Louisville—Brandeis School of Law

Approximately 25 applicants are given the opportunity to participate in a six-week course (Monday through Thursday evenings) designed to enhance their skills in order to improve their chances for success in law school. All who complete the work in a satisfactory (effort and performance are evaluated) manner are allowed to enter law school in the fall. Most, if not all, of the participants successfully matriculate each fall.
Loyola—New Orleans

We offer a program of approximately 20–25 students who participate in a 6-week course. Performance in the course determines whether a student is offered admission.

Michigan State University

Yes, special attention to nonquantifiable factors in addition to LSAT and GPA. Successful completion allows students to continue into first year.

University of New Mexico

Students selected to participate in the Performance–Based Admission Program (PBAP) spend two weeks in a classroom setting where they are given instruction in one substantive law course by experienced faculty members. Additionally, students learn basic skills: how to prepare for class; how to organize and outline course material; and how to answer legal questions. Applicants are evaluated through diagnostic testing, oral and written assignments and interviews. These evaluations determine whether the PBAP applicant will be admitted to the School of Law in the fall.

North Carolina Central University School of Law

A 6 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take two classes, Criminal Procedure and Negotiable Instruments. Students do not receive credit for the classes. Approximately 150 students participate, subject to change yearly. The admissions committee invites selected students to participate in the program. There is no special application procedure. In order for the student to matriculate into law school in the fall, the criteria is no grade below a C in either class and a GPA of 2.5. This year the program cost was $3500, this is also subject to change. The contact person for the program is Beth Hall, Assistant Dean for Admissions, hallb@nsu.law.nova.edu (954)262-6117

Nova Southeastern University

The Admission/Early Arrival Program (EAP) is a summer arrival program beginning at the end of may and including in mid-July. The focus in EAP is on admitted students a first look at law school and building the confidence and skills necessary to succeed in law school. The class size is limited to approximately 20 students. Interested applicants must apply for both EAP and fall admission on the application. The committee uses a number of factors to evaluate candidates who have applied for EAP admission. One factor is a disparate GPA and LSAT score. A prospective student with a relatively low GPA but with a very competitive LSAT score may possess the ability to succeed in law school and might be an ideal applicant for EAP. In the alternative, a prospective student who does not test well on standardized exams but has demonstrated success in the classroom through a competitive GPA may also be a good fit for EAP. Finally, a prospective student who may have been out of the classroom environment for a number of years and who needs additional transition time might apply for the EAP. The program is designed to build the confidence and skills necessary to succeed in law school. The EAP students take tough courses from some of our very best professors. The program is not provisional in any way; students admitted through EAP automatically matriculate in the fall with the other first year students. EAP students simply arrive earlier than the rest of the class and earn law school credits during the summer. Prospective students interested in the EAP program should write a brief statement detailing why they should be considered for EAP. The deadline for EAP applications is March 15. For more information on EAP or application strategy please do not hesitate to email Susan Wilson, Recruitment Specialist at susanwilson@ou.edu. Susan works with applicants on an individual basis to answer questions about the law school admission process, OU Law’s admission process, and law school in general.

Oklahoma City University

Two pass/fail courses.
Saint John's University

A 6 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take one class which varies from summer to summer. The class is always a first-year required course, last year it was Property, the year before it was Contracts. Students receive credit for the class, if they successfully complete the program by earning a B minus or better. Approximately 30 students participate each summer. Applicants need to request consideration for the Summer Institute no later than March 30th. Alternatively, an applicant may be invited to the program if their application is not otherwise admissible. In order to matriculate in the fall, students must earn a B minus or better in the course. The student pays only the cost of books. There is a required $750 deposit (the same as for all admits). If the student successfully completes the program this deposit is credited towards tuition, if not, the $750 is refunded to them. For more information contact either Robert M. Harrison, Assistant Dean for Admissions, harrisor@stjohns.edu, or Theresa McNerney, mcnernt1@stjohns.edu.

Saint Louis University

The Summer Institute at Saint Louis University is designed to identify students who have experienced the effects of educational disadvantage. The Institute includes a substantive first semester course and a course in legal skills. The program lasts seven weeks, beginning in late May/early June and ending in mid-July. Students who successfully complete this program are accepted into the School of Law for the Fall semester. Limited to 25 students. Tuition and books are free.

St. Mary's University

A 5 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take two classes, Logic & Writing and Analytical Skills. Between 15-20 students participate in the program. They are recommended by the Admissions Committee from the general applicant pool, and selected by the Program Director. There is no special application procedure. In order to matriculate into law school in the fall, the student must be recommended for admission by the professors conducting the summer program after completion. The cost of the program is $1500. The contact person is Professor John Teeter, jteeter@stmarytx.edu.

Seattle University

7 week required attendance in the Alternative Admission Program. All students are considered full members of the entering class and guaranteed admission in fall.

University of South Dakota

A 6 week screening program which will yield 10 admits. Between 30–50 students participate in the program. Students are required to take two classes, Agency and Personal Property. Students are selected based on a completed file that is eligible to begin law school that fall; usually the only concern is in the numbers, either a low LSAT and/or GPA. Applicants cannot apply for the program; they are invited to participate after review of the law school application and supporting material. During the final week of the program, participants take an exam in each course, anonymously. The two exam scores are averaged, and those who have a minimum grade of 70 (mid-C) on EACH exam, AND whose scores rank in the top ten of the program are offered admission. The cost of the program is $1,000 plus books, and room & board. The contact person for the program is Jean Henriques, Admissions Officer, jhenriqu@usd.edu.
Syracuse University

A 3 week, summer program called Leo Education Opportunity Program (LEO) that is not a conditional admission program, but a program that provides and opportunity for students who may not have otherwise been offered admission. Students are required to take three classes, Introduction to Law and the Legal System, Legal Writing Workshop, and Legal Skills. Students do not receive credit for the classes. Between 20–30 students usually participate in the LEO program. Recognizing that numerical indicators are not always the best predictors of success in law school—even when considered in combination with other factors—the College of Law admits a limited number of students each year through the LEO program. There is no special application procedure. Students do not need to achieve set grades during this program, but need to successfully complete the program requirements and take an exam at the end of the three weeks. Tuition costs are covered for all LEO participants during the summer program. For more information, contact either Nikki Laubenstein, Director of Admissions, aslauben@law.syr.edu, or Melanie Rodriguez, Assoc. Director of Student Life, mcrdriguez@law.syr.edu

Texas Southern University

Special attention to non-quantifiable factors in addition to LSAT and GPA. Successful completion allows students to continue into first year.

Texas Tech University

A 4 week summer conditional admission program. Required courses change from year to year. Students receive credit for the summer classes. Approximately 20-25 students participate in the program. The Admissions Committee decides which students will be considered for this program and those that will be accepted for the program. It is designed for those with lower academic indicators, but additional information in the file indicates the ability to succeed in law school. There is no special application procedure. If accepted for the summer program, they must attend the summer program to proceed to the fall. There is no required grade point average from the summer to proceed to the fall. The current tuition rate is $334 for Texas residents and $580 for non-residents. Students will pay the current tuition rate and all tuition generated fees. Since these rates change from year to year, the applicant should check the university website for current information. The contact person for the program is Terence L. Cook, Assistant Dean for Admissions and Recruitment, terence.cook@ttu.edu.

Texas Wesleyan School of Law

The Pre-Admission Legal Studies (PALS) program is a School of Law conditional admit program requiring a B- or better performance. Students are invited into the program via the admissions process.

Thomas M. Cooley Law School

The Professional Exploration Program (PEP) is a 5–8 day intensive program. This program is designed to give law school applicants who do not meet the minimum admissions requirements a chance to qualify for alternative admission. It also provides law school applicants the opportunity for self-exploration and discovery of strengths and weaknesses in their pursuit of a career. At the completion of the program, the students’ performance is evaluated by the PEP Committee. Students are notified by letter, three weeks after the program, as to the committee’s decision whether they’ve been offered admission to Thomas M. Cooley Law School.
Widener University School of Law

A 6 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take three classes. Students do not receive credit for the classes. Student participation varies from year to year, but usually 75 to 100 participants at each campus. Criteria for admission is based on applicants who have displayed promise of success in legal studies even though they may have excelled in only one of the two principal standardized predictors of success—the Law School Admission Test and the undergraduate grade point average. The personal statement, letters of recommendation and all materials submitted in support of the application are considered. There is no special application procedure. Participants who obtain a 2.3 cumulative grade point average in the program are offered admission to the fall class. The cost of the program is $1500. The contact person for the program is Barbara Ayars, Assistant Dean for Admissions, blayars@mail.widener.edu, (302) 477-2162.

E. SCHOOLS PERMITTING PRE-SELECTION OF STUDENTS TO BE INTERVIEWED BY FIRMS

Schools listed below unless otherwise noted, permit firms interviewing on campus to pre-select 100% of the candidates they will interview. Only schools responding to the Wilson/Stern survey were included.

University of Alabama
All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers pre-select candidates.

Albany Law School

American University

University of Arizona
All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers are permitted to pre-select 100%.

Arizona State University College of Law
May pre-select 100%.

Arkansas—Little Rock

Baylor University

Boston College Law School
While employers may pre-select all candidates, they are strongly encouraged to participate in an interview lottery system to ensure that all interested students have a broad range of interviewing opportunities. Over 90% of employers participate in our lottery system.

Boston University Law School
All employers are required to allot 30% of their interview schedule to lottery candidates with exceptions for intellectual property employers or employers requiring a specific undergraduate background.

Brooklyn Law School
All students are permitted to submit for all employers. While employers are permitted to pre-select 100% of the candidates, they are strongly encouraged to reserve interview slots for students ranked below their stated criteria so that a larger number of interested students have interviewing opportunities.

University at Buffalo—SUNY
Interview schedules are 100% pre-screened by employers. No students are prohibited from applying to any employers.

University of California—Davis

California Western University

Capital University

Benjamin N. Cardozo (Yeshiva)
A portion of students (approximately 15%) are selected by lottery.

Case Western Reserve University
All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers are permitted to pre-select 100%.

Catholic University of American
All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers are permitted to pre-select 100% of candidates whom they will interview.

H. WHAT SCHOOLS DO WITH MULTIPLE LSAT SCORES

Only those schools responding to the Wilson/Stern Survey are included.

University of Akron
If an applicant has multiple LSAT scores, we will consider the highest score.

University of Alabama
Highest score considered.

Albany Law School
Review all scores.

American University
Admission Committee reviews all scores, but typically considers higher score for admission purposes.

Appalachian School of Law
Highest of last 3 years score for admissions purposes.

University of Arizona
Most scores are averaged unless they are 10 points or more apart. If they are, we use the higher score.

Arizona State University College of Law
The highest score is used in all reporting and given more significant consideration. Admissions committee sees and reviews all scores.

University of Arkansas—Fayetteville
We take the highest of the final three scores.

Baylor University

Boston College Law School
Considers all scores in file review process. Will also consider explanations for difference in scores.

Boston University Law School
Highest score considered.

University of Baltimore
If more than 7 points apart and GPA is 3.0 plus, take highest.

Brooklyn Law School
The Committee on Admissions will see all reported scores and give substantial weight to the highest score.

University at Buffalo—SUNY
While the Admissions Committee will see all reported scores, we place considerably more weight on the highest LSAT score.

University of California—Berkeley
Take highest score.

University of California—Davis
In keeping with past practice, consideration will be given to all LSAT scores. Applicants are asked to provide additional information when there is a score difference of 5 points or higher. The highest score will be the score of record.

University of California—Hastings College of the Law
Highest score used.

University of California—Los Angeles
Highest score with discretion of considering all.

California Western University
Most recent if highest, otherwise averaged.

Campbell University
We generally use the highest score; however, we do consider each individual score and any explanation offered for the lower score.

Capital University
Will consider highest score; generally, for three or more scores, the average is used. Explanations for differences welcome.

Benjamin N. Cardozo (Yeshiva)
Review all scores, may give highest consideration to high LSAT.

Case Western Reserve University
Consider highest score, but all scores reviewed.
Catholic University
Average. If there is a significant difference, the higher one may carry more weight.

Chapman University School of Law
The ABA has changed the rule regarding the reporting of the highest of multiple LSAT scores, however, this does not change the review process. If the candidate has taken the LSAT multiple times, the Committee will review all of the LSAT scores. From an admissions perspective, the average score may be the best indication of an applicant's success. It is advisable for the applicant to explain why one score is more indicative of his or her likelihood of success. For merit scholarship purposes, we will utilize the high LSAT SCORE.

University of Chicago
We review all scores, however for reporting purposes we use high LSAT.

Chicago-Kent College of Law
If the LSAT is taken more than once, the Admissions Committee may consider the average score, the more recent score or the higher score, depending on individual circumstances. Preference is typically given to the highest score earned.

University of Cincinnati
Use highest score.

City University of New York (CUNY) School of Law
Consider all scores, with some weight being given to highest.

University of Colorado
Consider highest score, but all scores reviewed. Explanations for large differences are welcome.

Columbia University
The Committee considers the entire LSAT testing history when evaluating applications for admission.

University of Connecticut
All scores are considered however, the high LSAT score is used when reporting.

Cornell University
Consider highest score, but all scores reviewed. Explanations for differences are suggested.

Creighton University
Unless there is reason to discount one.

University of Dayton
Generally accept highest, although all scores are considered.

University of Denver
Generally accept highest, although all scores are considered.

DePaul University College of Law
We will consider the high score.

University of Detroit Mercy
We review all scores.

University of the District of Columbia School of Law
Consider highest score, but all scores are reviewed.

Drake University
Consider highest score, but all scores reviewed.

Duke University
Will consider higher score or average, depending on circumstances and the overall context of the application. An addendum is suggested when there is a significant difference between test scores.

Duquesne University
First two scores not averaged.

Emory University
The law school admission committee will consider all reportable LSAT scores. The admission committee will use the LSAT score that in their estimation best represents an applicant's academic ability.

University of Florida
Review all scores. Candidates should discuss score differences.

Florida Coastal School of Law
Florida Coastal School of Law uses the highest score.

Loyola Law School—Los Angeles
The average score is used unless the applicant has submitted an explanation for the lower score.

University of Maine School of Law
Averages scores, significant increase noted.

University of Maryland
Use the higher score.

Marquette University
In the case of an applicant with more than one LSAT score, the Admissions Committee will receive a test score report for the applicant that discloses all LSAT scores and the average of those scores. The Admissions Committee may give the highest score priority on a case-by-case basis, especially if the applicant can provide compelling, convincing evidence in a brief written addendum explaining why a lower LSAT score should be considered aberrant.

Mercer University
Average multiple LSAT scores.

University of Memphis
Use highest for multiple takings.

University of Miami
Highest LSAT given the greater weight.

University of Michigan
Consideration given to each score and to average.

Michigan State University
Average scores.

Mississippi College School of Law
Use highest score but review the range of scores.

University of Mississippi
Admissions decisions are based upon the highest LSAT score.

University of Missouri—Columbia
Averages scores.

University of Missouri—Kansas City
Use the higher score, although all scores are considered before making an admission decision.

University of Montana
Scores are averaged for the prediction index but all scores are taken into consideration.

University of Nebraska
Average multiple LSAT scores. Admission Committee reviews all scores.

University of Nevada—Las Vegas
Highest LSAT given the greater weight.

New England Law | Boston
Use the highest score, although all scores are taken into consideration.

University of New Hampshire School of Law
Review all; report highest score.

New York Law School
The entire application is reviewed, including all LSAT scores. In the unusual circumstance of a significant difference between scores, additional weight is given to the higher score when the candidate is able to provide us with reasons for that difference.

New York University
The Committee on Admissions evaluates LSAT scores based on the average score in most cases. The Committee may take special circumstances into account. If a candidate can point out specific reasons why the Committee should consider an LSAT score aberrant, they should detail those reasons in an addendum to the personal statement.

University of North Carolina
We use the higher of two scores. With more than two scores, we decide on a case by case basis between average or highest.

North Carolina Central University
Average multiple LSAT scores.

J. PREFERRED MEANS OF RECEIVING LETTERS OF RECOMMENDATION

Each law school was asked to indicate its preferred means of receiving letters of recommendation. The four options listed below were offered. The list indicates preferences of schools responding.

(1) We accept those letters of recommendation which have been processed through the Law Services Letters of Recommendation Services.

(2) We prefer that students use the Law Services Letter of Recommendation Services but do accept letters directly from the recommender or the undergraduate institutions’ credential service.

(3) We prefer letters which come directly from the recommender or the undergraduate institution’s credential service but do accept letters from the Law Service Letter of Recommendation Service.

(4) We have no preference.

L. SCHOOLS USING A FORMULA IN THE ADMISSIONS PROCESS

Only those schools responding to the Wilson/Stern Survey are included.

These schools indicated that a formula is used for pre-sorting and as an aid in determining the process for considering the file but not for determining the decision.

The specific formula used by a law school is provided in cases where that information is available.

December LSAT Questions

If an applicant takes the LSAT a second time in December, do you prefer that the applicant.

- a) complete and forward their application but notify you that they will be taking the test in December; or
- b) wait to submit their application until a score is received?

<td>Our application asks for any LSAT tests you have taken or plan to take. If you decide to take an LSAT test that you did not indicate on your application, you need to notify the Law Admissions Office so that your application can be placed on hold until the score is received. Once a decision is rendered there is no appeals process; all decisions are final. You can either apply after your score has been received or before, and we will hold your application for all tests taken before our application deadline of April 15. It may be beneficial to submit your application beforehand so that we can begin processing your documents.</td>

We ask applicants the dates on which they have/will be taking the LSAT. We would not make a decision until all LSAT scores are reported. If they didn’t tell us they were retaking, we would reconsider the decision.

But the student should request reconsideration in writing and inform the admissions office about the February LSAT.

The student should request reconsideration in writing and inform the admissions office about the February LSAT.

We will reconsider, as long as the applicant notifies us that they are taking a future LSAT.

Additional Note:

- Applicants are not rejected strictly on the basis of LSAT. Applicants who appear to have the character, background, and experience to become good lawyers but who do not meet the current admissions standards are eligible to participate in the Law Screening Program. The program is held each summer. Participants compete academically for 10 seats in the entering class.

- If we are notified of the Feb LSAT, we will not review until the score is received.

- Stanford Law applicants must take the LSAT no later than December of the current admission season.

- Applicants must let us know that they are taking the February LSAT.

- We ask students to tell us if they are taking the February LSAT and we wait for the score before making a decision.

- An applicant taking the February test is encouraged to place their application on hold pending the new score. Once a decision is rendered during the current cycle, the applicant must wait for new cycle to reapply.

FAQ’S

IN-STATE TUITION RATES AFTER ONE YEAR

For the purpose of in-state tuition rates at state law schools, are students able to be counted as state residents after a year of enrollment?

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Institution</th>
<th>Description</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>University of California–Berkeley</td>
<td>Students have the opportunity to become California residents after their first year of law school.</td>

FAQ’S

IN-STATE TUITION RATES AFTER ONE YEAR

For the purpose of in-state tuition rates at state law schools, are students able to be counted as state residents after a year of enrollment?

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Institution</th>
<th>Description</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Southern Illinois University School of Law</td>
<td>Yes, students can become an in-state resident after six months.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Temple University Beasley School of Law</td>
<td>The general rule is that if a student did not live in the state of Pennsylvania for at least one year while not in school and prior to enrolling, he/she is presumed to be a non-resident for tuition purposes. However, a student may overcome this presumption by showing that he/she came to the state for reasons other than attending law school, or by providing sufficient proof of intent to remain in the state after graduation from law school.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>University of Utah</td>
<td>Students may apply for residency after completing 40 credits. Students earn 30 credits at the end of the first year of law school. They may then take 10 credits during the summer to apply for residency by the fall of second year.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>William &amp; Mary</td>
<td>Yes, any student may apply for residency classification when they believe they qualify. Eligibility information and the domicile form is located on the web.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>William S. Boyd School of Law</td>
<td>Yes, if student meets requirements for establishing state residency.</td>
